

Changing the internals of a high-pressure valve up to 4 times a year – that really need not be normal!

Because you're responsible for keeping things running in the plant, you know the typical problems in your production process. Installations with high pressure differences and frequent switching cycles are very high on maintenance, and the control valves have to be serviced all too often. But are such repairs really necessary? Must the valve seats and internals always be doomed to a short lifespan?

No!

For over 30 years now, the ZK product range of control valves has been offering a solution that is technically superior and prolongs the repair intervals considerably. Trouble-free service over several years without any signs of wear is perfectly normal for a ZK valve. Contact us when one of your valves has to be repaired prematurely again. We'll give you all the details you need on specific alternatives using our ZK control valves. Or simply ask for the current brochure on the ZK series for a general overview ahead of time.
